TWO CUP CAMEOS

Chelsea bass player and singer Mr. Reg Smith, of Christchurch Street, felt a bit silly on Saturday night. He was booked by Spurs to play at their Cup Final celebration party at the Savoy, and naturally had to sing their victory song, "Glory Glory Hallelujah." But Mr. Smith is a Chelsea supporter.

"I had hoped to play Chelsea's celebration at the Carlton Tower Hotel, but Spurs booked me first. Of course I didn't know then it was to be a victory celebration," he said.

The seriousness of a "model parliament" organised by Young Conservatives at Chelsea Town Hall on Saturday evaporated somewhat because of the Cup Final.

Their Press officer, Mr. David Wilkinson, said afterwards: "Varying degrees of disorder ruled over the proceedings, partly because members wanted to keep in touch by radio with the world situation outside their parliament—which meant the Cup Final score."

The parliament was set up by West London Y.C.s on the basis of the Westminster model, with Speaker and model "Prime Minister."

Janie Jones says 'Thanks all' after her acquittal

After a 100-minute retirement, a jury at the Inner London Sessions acquitted Janie Jones, 27-year-old blonde singer of Holland Park, Nottingham.

She appeared on her second trial — the first jury disagreed after a seven-day trial — and the second trial lasted eight days. In her correct name of Marion Mitchell, she pleaded not guilty to unlawfully keeping a brothel at Kensington Park Gardens, Kensington.

The first jury was absent for four hours.

The police alleged that they kept observation on her flat in August and September and they saw men arrive. They said they saw Miss Mitchell and her flatmate, Miss Janice Steinberg, take off their clothes and sit on men's laps and then go to a bedroom.

'PACK OF LIES'
Miss Mitchell was nine hours in the witness box on her second trial during which she declared the police evidence was "a pack of lies." At the time of the police observation she was on bail pending an Old Bailey trial for alleged blackmail, of which she was acquitted and she alleged the object of the police raid was for them to get possession of tape recordings she had of conversation with "Mr. A" who was concerned in the blackmail case.

She also declared that a number of objects produced at the trial as "brothel paraphernalia" were in fact "planted" by the police.

HUGGING

After her acquittal, Miss Mitchell hugged her counsel and she was kissed and cuddled by her relatives and friends.

She said in an interview that she was seriously considering taking action against the police but had to get legal advice as to what form it should take.

Since her arrest for the alleged offence she had lost a considerable sum of money because although a TV producer was willing for her to go on with a series "the heads" would not permit. She said she had also lost a job in the Bahamas and it had cost her several thousand pounds to defend herself.

"I had to sell my flat in Kensington Park Gardens to pay the expenses and I am also selling my present one in Holland Park," she said.

JURY PRAISED

Miss Mitchell said that the case must have been a difficult one for the jury because they had to decide against the police.

"I want to thank every one of them," she said.

Miss Mitchell added that she had been treated very kindly during the few days she had spent in Holloway Prison and said that after a short holiday she intended to resume her TV and singing career.

DRUGS CHARGE

Wearing a mauve mini-skirt, a shortie suede coat and calf-length leather boots, a 27-year-old blonde model, Amanda Lear, of Nell Gwynn House, Sloane Avenue, Chelsea, was remanded until June 2 at Marlborough Street, accused of possessing without authority a dangerous drug—nine tablets of Phenytoine—at Kings Road, Chelsea.

Woman Det-con. Morag McGibben, of the Drugs Squad, applied for the remand to magistrate Mr. Edward Robby, saying that the tablets had to be analysed.

Lear was allowed bail in her own recognisance in £100 and the £100 surety of a smartly dressed woman who gave her name as the Hon. Mrs. April Corbett.
